Amanda Cleary Eastep	Author, Developmental Editor	Moody	As a developmental editor, I can answer questions about self-editing and the editorial process for a newly contracted author. As a children's author, I'm open to any questions about writing, editing, and publishing.
Amy Vos	Editor	Tyndale House Publishers	I will welcome pitch meetings from fiction authors and am interested in proposals for full-length novels with great writing and compelling hooks in the following categories: Contemporary women's fiction, contemporary romance, Southern fiction (historical or contemporary), historical fiction (including biblical and dual-timeline), historical romance, and mystery and suspense geared towards a female readership. My team does not acquire YA or children's fiction and is not currently looking for sci-fi, magical realism, fantasy, or thrillers.
Andy LePeau	Author, Editor	na	Academic works, Bible study guides, and other non-fiction books for general readers; know the overall landscape of Christian publishing. I am the author of Write Better: A Lifelong Editor on Craft, Art, and Spirituality and I blog regularly at andyunedited.com. Writers better off making direct contact with a publisher or an agent when they have the chance. But if somebody has an academic project, feels completely at sea or has no idea where to start, maybe I could help a bit. I have little experience with devotionals, fiction or children's books
Ann Kroeker	Writing Coach	na	Nonfiction articles, essays, and books; building/expanding author platform (including strategies and plans related to social media, podcasting, lead magnets, and more), book proposal development, how to navigate the publishing world, how to improve craft, how to know where to focus time and resources based on their goals, how to determine their next step(s)
Athena Dean Holtz	Publisher	Redemption Press	Accepting proposals and manuscripts from all genres found within the Christian marketplace as we partner with you on your publishing journey. I would love to answer your questions and help you navigate your next step.
Becky Robinson	CEO	Weaving Influence	Writing non-fiction who are considering self-publishing or looking for help growing their platform and marketing their work.

Blythe Daniel	Agent, Author	The Blythe Daniel Agency	Authors who write non-fiction, including personal stories, family, leadership, women's, and culturally engaging, relevant books in addition to curriculum, gift, devotionals, and cookbooks. We have a select number of juvenile fiction books.
Carol Tetzlaff	Associate Publisher	Redemption Press	Whether you have a book idea, proposal, or manuscript, we are looking to partner with authors who have a passion to expand the kingdom with their message. Personal area of expertise: Bible study, devotionals, Christian Living - we also accept fiction, memoirs, YA, children's.
Carrie Stuart Parks	Author	na	Authors of fiction seeking advice.
Cynthia Ruchti	Agent, Author	Books & Such Literary	FICTION SPECIFICS: Not acquiring Children's, YA, speculative or fantasy, or Amish; I am looking for contemporary and historical, general, romance, romantic suspense, rom-com, but always with something unique in either the writing or subject that stands out as different from everything else out there, and yet that well fits the category NONFICTION SPECIFICS: Not currently acquiring memoir or personal stories unless the personal stories are reader-centric rather than author-centric and offer an angle that has not already been covered by other published authors; I am looking for a limited number of Bible studies (also not run-of-the-mill); I'm looking for Christian Living, devotionals, solid biblical foundation with practical and accessible application for the reader; I'm looking for nonfiction writers who understand the importance of already connecting with readers and potential readers through their website and newsletter and the way they interact compellingly on social media.
Dan Balow	Agent	The Steve Laube Agency	Nonfiction books for adults and books for children. No fiction.
David Bennett	Managing Editor	Lifeway Christian Resources	I am looking for faith-based articles of approximately 750 and 1500 words on spiritual growth, marriage, parenting, and living on mission. Articles should speak to either/both a younger (25-55) and older (55-85) audience. I am also looking for devotional content for men, women, and the general adult population. As an agent of Lifeway, I am happy to pass on other submissions and proposals.
Emma Fulenwider	Agent	Wordserve Literary	One-sheet/query; Non-Fiction books that are funny, nerdy or helpful. NOT looking for Articles, screenplays, short stories, children's books, fiction

Grace Kelley	Editor	Focus on the Family	As a representative of Focus on the Family's children's magazines, I'm interested in fun and exciting stories for children. In particular, I would like to see fun and lesson-filled short stories, nature articles, poetry, devotions, and non-fiction articles—all for children ages 3-7 or 8-12.
Janyre Tromp	Author, Editor	na	Want to take your writing to the next level? Whether you need encouragement, accountability, a fresh perspective, or expert publishing advice, I'm here to help. As an award-winning editor and bestselling author, I guide both fiction and nonfiction writers from idea to finished book—offering the insight, support, and practical strategies you need to succeed.
Josiah DeGraaf	Writer, Trainer	The Author Conservatory	I'm happy to help writers looking for help with general story development (including advice on story concept development, plot structure, character development, and chapter pacing), email list growth, email newsletters & marketing, author website development, and Kickstarter."
Katara Patton	Executive Editor	Our Daily Bread	Our Daily Bread Publishing is looking for devotionals and compilations that make the word of God more accessible to people. We also acquire some children and youth work, Bible studies, Christian Living titles focusing on prayer, other spiritual differences, women and men's interest, and African American interests (VOICES Collection).

Lori Roeleveld	Author, Mentor	na	I've coached (and prayed with) over 150 authors. I can provide feedback on nonfiction writing of any length or your book proposal. I'm happy to discuss strategies for building/expanding your brand/platform, navigating the publishing world, taking your writing to the next level, determining where to focus time and resources based on your goals, discerning your next steps, earning income through writing/speaking, or overcoming setbacks, discouragement, factors related to being an older writer or disappointing feedback
Luke McKinnon	Senior Editor	David C. Cook Publishing	Writers of more theological nonfiction. Worldview, apologetics would be a focus.
Saundra Dalton-Smith	Author, Speaker, Physician	na	I can provide feedback on nonfiction writing of any length or your book proposal. I'm happy to discuss strategies for building/expanding your brand/platform, navigating the publishing world, taking your writing to the next level, determining where to focus time and resources based on your goals, discerning your next steps, earning income through writing/speaking, or overcoming setbacks, discouragement, factors related to being an older writer or disappointing feedback.
Sharon Elliott	Agent	AuthorizeMe Literary	Currently considering: Christian living, Adult Non-fiction men's and women's general interest, Spiritual growth, Bible studies, Leadership, Devotionals, Parenting, Family, Children's (picture books and early readers, chapter books) Open to all ethnicities. Open to Christian writers of positive image books. Helping African American pastors turn their ideas into books to preserve their legacy and in building the literary careers of BIPOC and ADOS writers. I prefer to see a one-sheet (single spaced paragraphs) with the first 2 pages of the manuscript (double spaced) if the author's concise pitch and one-sheet interests me. Personal experience (if the readers' felt need is clear). Books for teens, millennials, Gen-Xers, and Gen-Zers (with the demonstration of a knowledge of these age groups and a connection to these audiences); Adult fiction (no sci-fi, fantasy, horror). I represent clients of all ethnicities and diverse backgrounds, and I have a special heart for seeing African American pastors get published. Can also help if an author is looking for general advice about next steps.
Shelley Bacote	Publicist	Tyndale House Publishers	I am not an acquisitions editor so will not be accepting pitches, but would be happy to discuss a publicity campaign for your book, offer practical ideas, and answer any questions.

Steve Laube	Agent	The Steve Laube Agency	Steve represents authors who write in the following fiction genres: women's fiction, romance, thriller, suspense, romantic suspense, Amish, literary, military, historical (all eras), contemporary, science fiction, fantasy, supernatural, YA—in other words, every genre published in the industry. He's looking for unique storylines with a well-refined craft. He's also looking for nonfiction. The types of nonfiction books and authors represented also exemplify my eclectic tastes: Christian living, biography, apologetics, theology, Bible study, reference, health, finance, self-help, psychology, grief, suffering, marriage, family, women's, men's, philosophy, church life, devotional, inspirational, social issues, politics, parenting, music, and art. The subjects are vast, and the opportunities are endless.
Susan McPherson	Senior Editor	David C. Cook Publishing	I acquire books and Bible studies that focus on women, family, and marriage, helping to bring meaningful and impactful resources to readers. In my appointments, I will serve in a consultative role, evaluating book ideas, proposals, platform, and goals to offer guidance and insights on the best path forward.
Talia Messina	Editor	Tyndale House Publishers	I'm interested in devotionals, Bible storybooks, Bible memorization books, and ancillary products that would help build our Go Bible brand or My Princess Bible brand
